6 QUESTIONS FOR NEXT-LEVEL LEADERSHIP

There's levels
to this thing.

#1:

What's it like to be on the other side of me?

We all work with at least one person
that isn't self-aware.

78% of working Americans
believe they're in the top 10% of their company.

2:

How can I get better?

Honesty is best received by invitation-only.

Intellectual Humility:
The importance of knowing
you could be wrong.

Reach out to 3-5
colleagues and ask them
how you can get better.

Communication

Communication Transparency

3:

Who is in my circle of influence?

If someone has gotten it wrong about us, then it's possible we're getting it wrong right now about somebody else.

Our chances of getting it right drastically increase when we lead with curiosity.

4:

Who am I paving the way for?

Lead in such a way that you help somebody else
get in the room.

5 :

Am I enjoying it?

Our level of gratitude
determines our level of enjoyment.

We have to be grateful for what we have. We have to be grateful for who we have.

Make a list of what you can control and what you cannot.

Give up complaining
for one week.

What would I do if I knew I couldn't fail?

That's just not me.

*That's just not me.
We don't do that here.*

Chasing failure
took me further than chasing
success ever did.
